Thai	Pannapat (Aom) Wongtaweesup	Semester 1
Grade		93.25
Grade Level		A
Points		4.00
Credit		0.5
Creek consistently demonstrates readiness and focus in his studies. He accurately comprehends the content covered in each topic. In narrative writing, he effectively incorporates all key elements, including an introduction, a discussion of conflicts or obstacles leading into the main story, and a conclusion. In the conclusion, he presents solutions derived from the story, shares thoughtful insights or moral lessons, and ends with an impressive and memorable quote. He can also accurately explain the background and significance of the Loy Krathong festival.

Health and Wellness	Mendeluz (Mendy) Bautista	Semester 1
Grade		93.06
Grade Level		A
Points		4.00
Credit		0.5
The students completed the unit on Addictive Substances. After basic neuroscience lessons, each student chose a specific substance to research, and then created an information poster for a teen audience. Creek showed diligence and integrity in completing all assigned learning tasks - including both practical and academic work. He continued to make good progress as a collaborator and team player. He also excelled in most quizzes. I hope that Creek will continue to do his best next semester.

Chemistry	Isabel (Isabel) Costa	Semester 1
Grade		83.20
Grade Level		B
Points		3.00
Credit		0.5
This semester, students began with measurements and errors, focusing on accuracy. They explored material properties, phases, elements, compounds, mixtures, and methods for separating mixtures. Creek is a capable student who has been showing commendable progress. My advice to him is to maintain this level of interest and focus to continue achieving great results.

Physical Education	Raha (Raha) Mortel	Semester 1
Grade		93
Grade Level		A
Points		4.00
Credit		0.5

English	Jason (Jason) Cordray	Semester 1
Grade		87
Grade Level		B+
Points		3.33
Credit		0.7
During Unit 2 of the MyPerspectives curriculum, G10 students analyzed the question: "What does it mean to be an outsider?" by studying The Metamorphosis by Franz Kafka. They worked on annotation skills, genre analysis, and PEEL-based essay structures. Creek has met the standards for both group and individual work. His written responses reflect his engagement with the texts and meet expectations.

World History and Geography 2	David (David) Smith	Semester 1
Grade		83.31
Grade Level		B
Points		3.00
Credit		0.5
Creek has made good progress with PEEL paragraphs, though there is still room to refine arguments and strengthen evidence to support claims. He is participating more in class and consistently puts in good effort and engages with the material. For next semester, I would recommend that he reviews expectations for assignments prior to submission so he can achieve a better grade. He has great potential in the class.

Drama	Nichelle (Nichelle) Martyres	Semester 1
Grade		93.20
Grade Level		A
Points		4.00
Credit		0.5
During this semester, Creek immersed himself in understanding how drama processes impact an audience. His dedication and proficiency shone through in the high quality of his performances. Creek and his group directed a play inspired by the Greek Classic, The Birth of Aphrodite. Creek effectively showcased his grasp of the influence of drama processes and his experiences in theater. He was also able to reflect on these experiences through his reflective essays.

Mandarin (II)	Xin (Xin) Li	Semester 1
Grade		98
Grade Level		A
Points		4.00
Credit		0.5
Creek has a very positive approach in learning Mandarin and takes the subject seriously. He always hands in his work on time. He is always happy and enjoys the class. Creek is encouraged to speak more in Mandarin during class time which will help his verbal expression. He has achieved a good standard in all tasks set. Well done, Creek.

Algebra(II)	Ui Jun (CJ) Jung	Semester 1
Grade		89.8
Grade Level		B+
Points		3.33
Credit		0.7
Creek aspires to do well in the course, which is deservedly reflected in his grades. Creek has shown a lot of improvement from the beginning of the semester and is encouraged to continue this practice of putting in the hard work that he always gives. Overall, Creek has developed strong proficiency in analyzing and solving problems involving linear functions/systems, quadratic, polynomial, and rational functions, and preparing them to model and interpret real-world scenarios.

Principles of Phoenix - Learning Habits and Attitude

Creek is working on developing critical thinking and collaboration skills. This will allow him to better appreciate diverse viewpoints, understand the significance of teamwork, and leverage group dynamics for enhanced collective learning. It will also foster respect for the contributions of his peers.
